Traffic Stops and Crime Reduction

- Recent studies reveal a correlation between increased traffic stops and reductions in street robberies, non fatal shootings and auto theft.
- Koper Curve Theory
- Milwaukee PD conducted a 5 year study

Koper Curve Explained

- The Koper Curve is named for Christopher S. Koper, an associate professor at George Mason University and Senior Fellow at the university's Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy. The premise is based on the notion that most crime incidents occur in a small percentage of areas in a particular jurisdiction. Some studies indicate that as much as 50 percent of crime occurs in less than 5 percent of blocks or street segments.
- By focusing on these hot spots, Koper's research found, crime rates can be reduced substantially. Instead of stationing officers in one place or telling patrol officers to patrol hot spots is costly and ineffective. Instead, the theory recommends proactive, random and intermittent patrols of these hot spots for 10-16 minutes at least every two hours. Koper's research showed that the likelihood of criminal activity within 30 minutes of a patrol drive-by was 15 percent. When random police stops lasting 10-16 minutes were incorporated, the likelihood of criminal activity dropped to 4 percent.
- The key is intermittent, unscheduled patrols of a meaningful duration rather than regularly scheduled drop-ins.
- From a resource perspective the Koper Curve principle has other advantages. For one it makes better use of patrol officers' time. Secondly, it builds trust and credibility within the nearby community through increased presence and visibility.

"HOT SPOTS" POLICING IS EFFECTIVE

Evidence-Based Policing

Research has demonstrated that hot spots policing can be an effective crime reduction strategy. This finding is confirmed in George Mason University's impractical. The Koper Curve offers a more practical and efficient approach.

WHAT OFFICERS DO IN HOT SPOTS MATTERS

Simply telling officers to patrol hot spots, to increase misdemeanor arrests in those areas or to remain stationary in those areas for prolonged periods of time is costly and

PROACTIVE 10-16 MINUTE STOPS IN HOT SPOTS MAXIMIZES DETERRENCE

Intermittent patrol of micro-hot spots (street segments or blocks) of 10-16 minutes at least every two hours extends deterrence. According to Koper (1995), the likelihood of crime or disorder within 30 minutes after a patrol drive through was 15%; for stops of 10-16 minutes, the likelihood was reduced to 4%, causing deterrence to "peak."

HOT SPOT VISITS OR STOPS MUST BE RANDOM AND INTERMITTENT

To ensure that the patrols do not become predictable and therefore avoidable, patrols in micro-hot spots should be random and intermittent, as opposed to regularly scheduled, e.g., every two hours. CAD and Automated Vehicle Locators (AVLs) can be used to monitor and deploy patrol in hot spots.

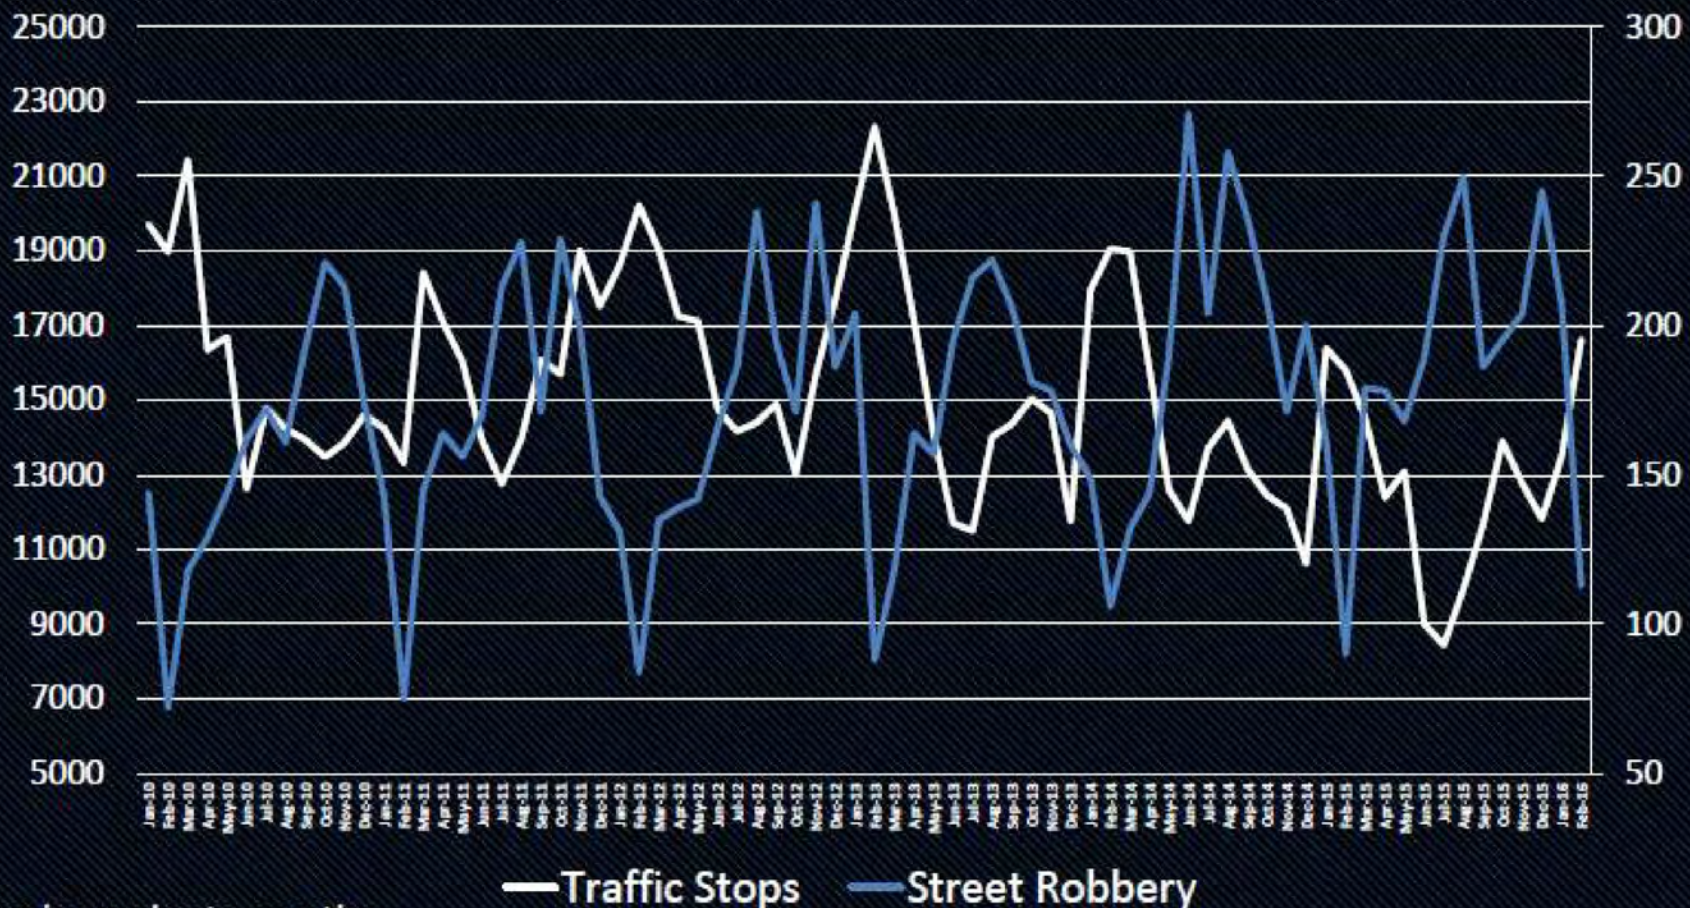

THE BENEFITS OF USING KOPER CURVE THEORY GO BEYOND CRIME REDUCTION

In addition to reducing Part I crimes in hot spots, using the Koper Curve Principle to guide deployment and patrol strategy makes better use of officer time. By increasing visibility and positive community engagement within hot spots, agencies are likely to enhance community trust and legitimacy, which may further impact crime reduction and improve satisfaction.

Milwaukee Study

- Conducted between January 2010 and February 2016
- Revealed a direct relation to reductions in shootings, street robberies, and auto theft when there was an increase in traffic stops.

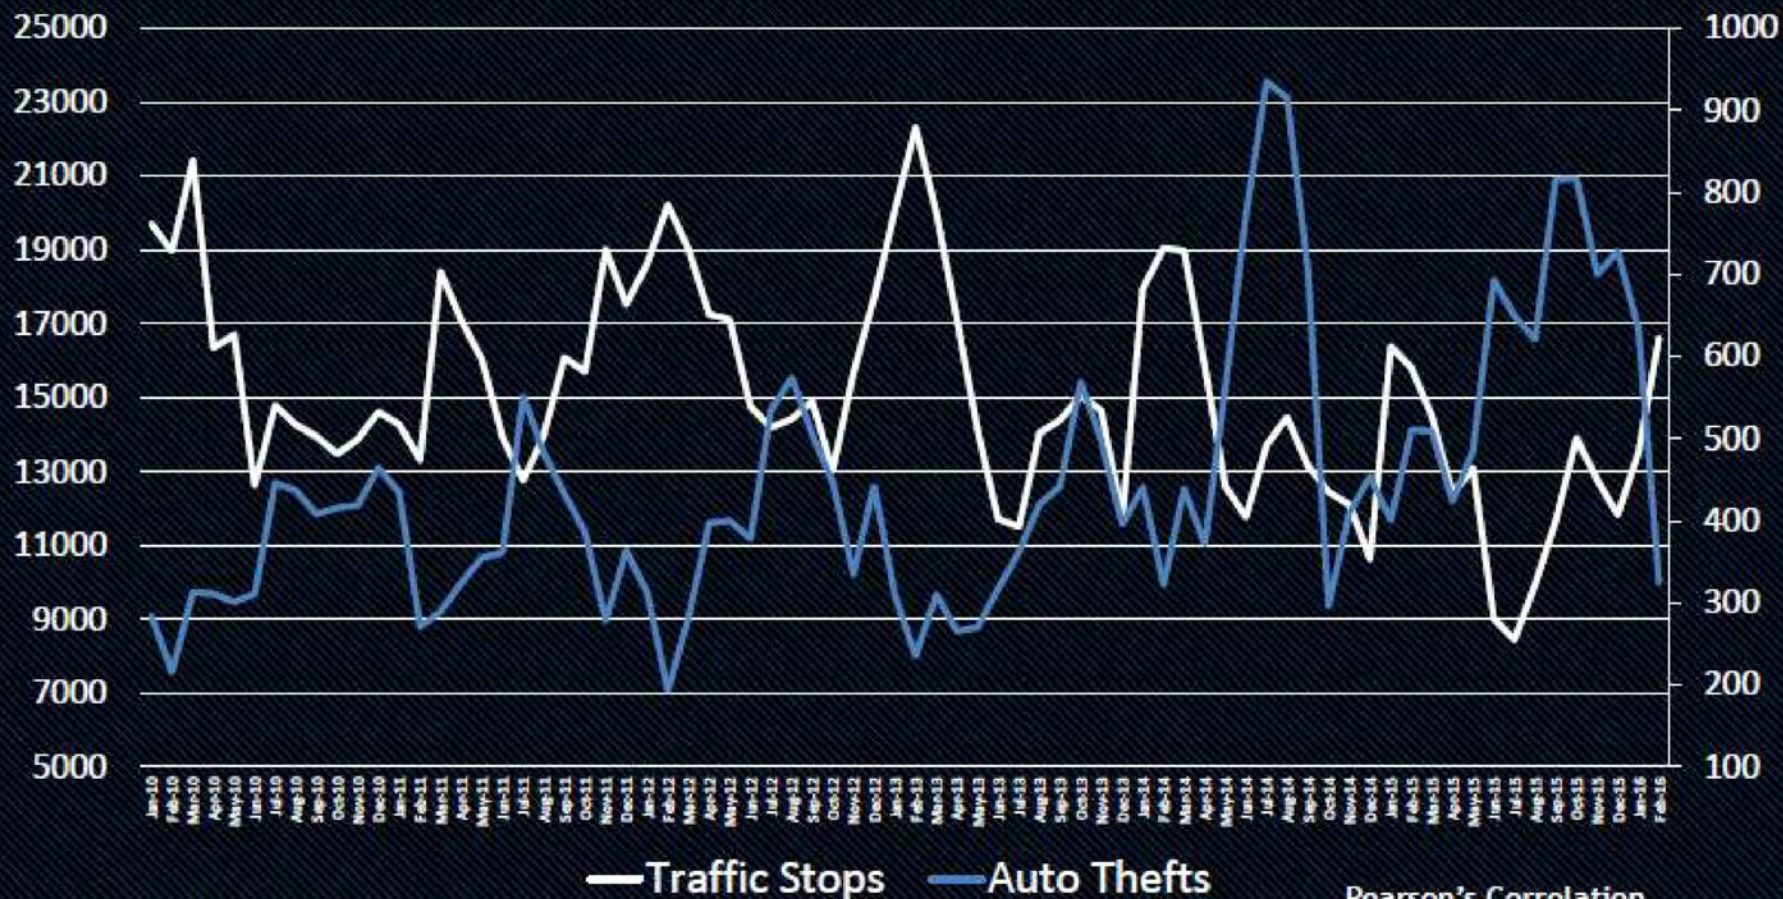

Traffic Stops & Street Robbery by Month

There is a moderate, negative correlation between traffic stops and street robbery. This finding is statistically significant.

Pearson's Correlation Coefficient (r) = $-.614$; $p=.000$

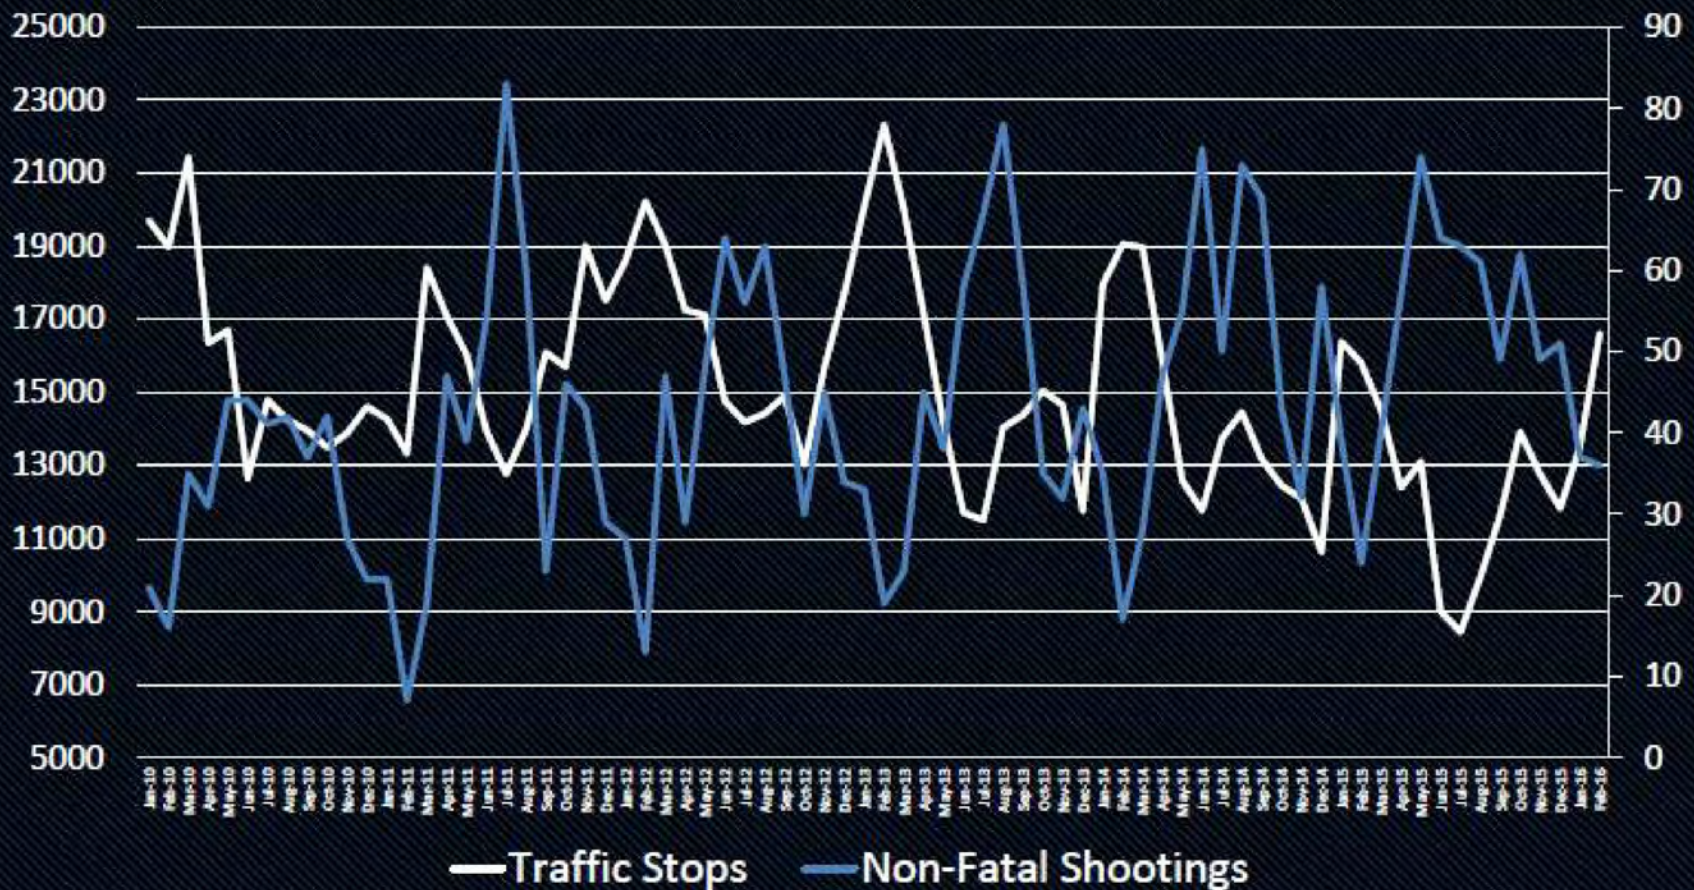

Traffic Stops & Auto Theft by Month

There is a moderate, negative correlation between traffic stops and car thefts. This finding is statistically significant.

Pearson's Correlation Coefficient (r) = $-.565$; $p=.000$
 Pearson's Correlation Coefficient (r) (Outliers Removed) = $-.618$; $p=.000$

Traffic Stops & Non-Fatal Shootings by Month

There is a moderate, negative correlation between traffic stops and non-fatal shootings. This finding is statistically significant.

Pearson's Correlation Coefficient (r) = $-.594$; $p = .000$

ChicagoTraffic Safety Plan

- Traffic enforcement to increase safety, build community trust and reduce crime
- Active and visible police presence will reduce crime. (BLUE LIGHTS)
- Proven fact that more traffic stops in an area will have a benefit of crime reduction and an increase in pedestrian and vehicle safety

Tactic to Build Community Trust

- Increase traffic stops
- Personnel to explain why subject being stopped
- Not encouraged to write citations when traffic violator is in compliance with DL and Insurance status (not a poor man's tax)
- Encourage safe driving habits
- Inform citizens that increased vigilance is to provide for a safer community

Tactic to Reduce Crime

- Strict enforcement on violators that are suspended and revoked
- 78% of suspended and revoked violators also have IR#s.
- Each district should experience a marked increase in vehicle impounds
- Taking a gang members car will reduce the chance of that vehicle being used in a crime

District/Unit's Role

- Planned traffic missions daily in locations where violence, and traffic crashes occur
- All field personnel to play a role (beat, rapid, mission, tactical, saturation, gang, summer mobile, OT, and Traffic).
- Supervisors should monitor activity daily, and document as necessary
- Ensure event # obtained on each stop, and timely submission of documentation

District/Unit Commander's Role

- Ensure daily missions are completed at each level of command
- Daily check that event #s are obtained (check the PCAD or Data Warehouse)
- Ensure timely data entry of TSSS and DIC cards
- Daily select locations for missions and track activity

Subject: ADDITIONAL INFORMATION CHANGE: CompStat Meeting Schedule

Commanders:

This Thursday there will be a different format from our regular CompStat district sessions. We will not be covering any administrative or property crime issues. The focus of the session will be murders and shootings - and most importantly district plans and efforts to address the violence through 31 December. At the beginning of each district's review, I will have Commander Panepinto discuss the concerns listed in the Year-End Forecast report that was distributed this week. We will cover the homicides with the Area similar to how we normally do (mentioning only murders with domestic or similar circumstances with limited risk of continued violence - as they are not the focus-- and ASK the Area to be able to highlight ALL murders suggesting a risk of ongoing violence), and we will also discuss key shootings that have a risk of retaliation. We will look at the responses to shootings in the 28-day as an indicator of adherence to the GVRS with a focus on addressing the risks of retaliation.

- Tactical lieutenants should be prepared to discuss the response of their teams to shootings and their post shooting missions and efforts.
- Watch commanders should be prepared to discuss watch-level deployments, shooting scene responses, and adherence to the GVRS to include the coordination in developing post shooting missions and coordinating with tactical and area resources and getting the SSRs to CPIC.
- SDSC sergeants should be prepared to speak to SDSC post shooting mission efforts -- AND their continual monitoring and analysis efforts in support of effective violence reduction deployments. This should include how they are prepared to brief personnel from other units deployed to the district for a tour of duty.
- CAPS sergeants should be prepared to speak to community engagement efforts relative to violence reductions.
- Most importantly, district commanders/executive officers should be prepared to speak to your overall plan to address violence through the end of the year. This should include your plans to address the concerns listed in the DOC Forecast AND your analysis of the murders and shootings from 21NOV thru 31DEC 2018 (do those same risks remain?) and your planned deployments and district-level response. District commanders should be able also to speak to their deployment coordination with personnel from other units (including how you are utilizing any Friday HQ personnel resources you have received/ may receive).

Area Deputy Chiefs should be able to indicate for each of these districts whether and how Area Saturation and Area Gang Teams are planned to be utilized.

Bureau of Organized Crime units should be prepared to speak to efforts during the 28-day associated to violence in those districts, and how BOC resources are anticipated to be deployed thru December.

BOD, Violent Crimes lieutenants should prep as normal for all murders and shootings occurring in the 28-days for the four districts. Fugitive Apprehension should prep as normal, but should also be prepared include their planned deployments to the impacted districts.

Thank you.

III. GENERAL INFORMATION

CompStat is a performance management process that is used to reduce crime, enhance implementation of Department strategies, foster compliance with Department standards, and achieve other Department goals and objectives. CompStat emphasizes thorough data analysis, information-sharing, and accountability as a means of improving effectiveness within and between the various units of the Department. A central component of the CompStat process involves regular meetings at which specific units, operations, or issues are highlighted and reviewed. The process includes the development and implementation of response plans to address identified crime trends and performance concerns, and the process requires on-going monitoring and follow-up. The Chicago CompStat Model utilizes a probative approach to assess unit, supervisory, and command performance in three categories:

- A. Readiness-examining factors relating to the unit's preparations to meet its assigned responsibilities.
- B. Response-examining factors relating to the unit's activities and operations.
- C. Reach-examining factors relating to the unit's internal staff utilization and coordination efforts with other units, agencies, and the community.
